Paralysis Situation is Unchanged

Health Officer Brophy Says No Cases Have Been Reported

Here—Colchester to Take Up Matter at Special Town Meeting—Children Forbidden to Enter Town of Windham—Windham Officials Will Not Recognize Health Certificates.

The infantile paralysis situation remained unchanged in this city on Wednesday. City Health Officer Edward J. Brophy said Wednesday evening that no cases have been reported here. Norwich is fortunate in this respect, as it seems to be the only city in this section that has escaped the plague. This is attributed to the strict quarantine methods that are being carried out in this city.

Colchester Situation Acute.

The situation has become so acute in Colchester that no petition a special town meeting has been called for next week to see what steps should be taken in regard to the matter. It is said that a special appropriation will be asked for to carry on the work. The announcement of the special town meeting was made on Wednesday night.

Thousands from New York.

Reports to the state board of health from New London and Windham counties show widespread alarm at the spread of infantile paralysis in view of the thousands of children from New York and other large cities who are spending the summer at shore resorts. It was said that there are more than 5,000 New York children under sixteen in New London and Windham counties. Many of them are being watched for evidence of the disease. Dr. Black said seven New York children with certificates from the United States public health service showed evidence of infantile paralysis a few days after they were admitted by the health authorities of New London county towns. County and town health officers are taking united action in an effort to isolate all New York children. Thirty health districts have established absolute quarantine.

In many instances scores of children are crowded into small farm houses or cottages. So great and sudden has been the influx of New York youngsters that to provide accommodations for them has become a problem. Even hereabouts have been requisitioned.

At three weeks' quarantine, the period of incubation of the disease, the children, who were taken from the home of John Garvey at 55 Riverview avenue, New London, by the health department on Wednesday. The house was quarantined as a precautionary measure three weeks ago. At that time a Fremo boy of Connecticut, who had been taken to the health department and was in quarantine in the house, where there are two children.

Examining Recent Arrivals.

Wednesday the health department caused several children, recent arrivals from New York, to be examined. Although the children did not come from the infected districts, the health department is taking no chances. Inspector Frank Savage reported to the department that there were no children either on the New London line steamer or on the train from New London Tuesday night or Wednesday.
